Cambridge Broadband Moves Into Europe

Fixed wireless specialist opens Paris office and appoints Director of Business Development

Cambridge, UK: 8 June 2001: Cambridge Broadband today announced the opening of its regional office in Paris and the appointment of Zine Seghier as Director of Business Development for the SEMEA (South Europe, Middle-East and Africa regions).

The opening of the Paris office represents a significant step in Cambridge Broadband's strategy for Europe, as Zine Seghier explains: "The opportunity for Fixed Wireless Access in this region is enormous and it is vital to our success that Cambridge Broadband has a strong presence here. We are already in contact with key industry players in France, Spain, Portugal, Greece and South-Africa and look to expand our influence in the coming months."

Zine Seghier has extensive international experience in the Broadband Access sector, having worked as a freelance consultant to companies such as Interwave, IRIDIUM Europe and Cairnwood International . Prior to his consultancy work, Zine Seghier was General Manager, France and Sales Director, EMEA of Microcom, a pioneer in internetworking, remote access and Internet equipment.

Zine Seghier holds a BS degree in Computing and an MBA in International Business Management from the European University in Paris.

The opening of the Paris office coincides with the opening of a further regional office in Germany.
